Call for the position of Associate Editor

The associate editorship of this journal, published by the MLA Forum, Languages, Literatures and Cultures, Medieval Iberian, is shared on a rotating basis among researchers in our sector of the profession. The Executive Committee of the MLA Forum, LLC Medieval Iberian, now seeks applications for the position of Associate Editor for La corónica. Applicants should be established scholars with publishing and editing experience in both English and Spanish. Evidence of successful collaborative work is required. The associate editor will be responsible for reviewing submissions, choosing outside readers, offering editorial suggestions, assembling and sending suggestions to authors, inviting some submissions as well as undertaking other tasks related to the pre-publication phase of a scholarly journal. Ideally the new Editor should be in a supportive department or program where the work of the journal may be shared with qualified colleagues and with graduate students as a mentored experience. The associate editor should expect an average of four or more hours of pro bono work each week year-round, with fluctuations over the course of the year. Assurance of institutional support and release time for editorial duties will form part of the successful application portfolio. Applicants must hold membership in the MLA.
